KNOW

MATT JULIA, NATIONAL FEATURES EDITOR

Winter on Nantucket is usually cold and quiet, but the tiny island off of Cape Cod was hustling and bustling on Monday thanks to the media circus surrounding Kevin Spacey. The actor was arraigned on indecent assault and battery charges at a Nantucket courthouse for allegedly groping an 18-year-old busboy at the Club Car restaurant and bar in 2016. Spacey's next court appearance is set for March, so expect this story to dominate the headlines throughout the first part of 2019.

WELCOME TO
METRO BOSTONTRUMP PLANS PRIME-TIME
ADDRESS, VISIT TO MEXICO

President Donald Trump plans to deliver a prime-time address to the nation on immigration on Tuesday and visit the U.S.-Mexico border on Thursday, as his administration grapples with a partial federal shutdown that began 16 days ago over his demand for funding for a border wall. The Republican president showed no sign of backing off his pledge to build a wall, which he says is necessary to stem illegal immigration. Democrats in Congress disagree with new House Speaker Nancy Pelosi calling the building of a wall "immoral." White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders announced on Twitter that Trump will make a trip to the border on Thursday and said details would be released soon. The visit likely will highlight security concerns pushed by the administration as justification for the wall. A short while later, Trump said in his own Twitter post that he will address the nation on Tuesday at 9 p.m. EST on the border situation. Lawmakers and Trump hit an impasse last month over Trump's demand that a bill to keep the federal government operational include money for a wall along the border with Mexico.

KARDASHIAN-BACKED
INMATE GIVEN CLEMENCY

Tennessee's governor on Monday commuted the life sentence of a woman convicted as a teenager of murdering a man who she said paid a trafficker to have sex with her, after Kim Kardashian and other celebrities took up her cause. Cyntoia Brown, now 30, was found guilty of first-degree murder in the killing of Johnny Allen, a 43-year-old Nashville real estate agent. She will walk out of prison on Aug. 7 after serving 15 years, Gov. Bill Haslam's office said. Brown was 16 at the time of the murder. Brown received a life sentence with the possibility of parole after serving a minimum of 51 years in prison. Without the governor's commutation, she would not have been eligible to be considered for parole until 2055 at the earliest. "Imposing a life sentence on a juvenile that would require her to serve at least 51 years before even being eligible for parole consideration is too harsh, especially in light of the extraordinary steps Ms. Brown has taken to rebuild her life," Haslam, a Republican, said in a statement.

TSA AGENTS WORK AT O'HARE AS GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN CONTINUES

A Transportation Security Administration (TSA) worker screens passengers and airport employees at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport on Monday. TSA employees are currently working under the threat of not receiving their next paychecks, scheduled for Jan. 11, because of the partial government shutdown, now in its third week. As a result, there have been reports of an increase in TSA workers calling in sick at some airports.

UBER DRIVER PLEADS GUILTY TO KILLING SIX

An Uber driver accused of fatally shooting six people in Michigan and wounding two others while on the job pleaded guilty to all charges on Monday, after initially blaming the ride-sharing company's app for compelling him to kill. Jason Dalton, 48, was charged with 16 counts, including six counts of murder and two counts of attempted murder after his nearly five-hour shooting spree on Feb. 20, 2016, in Kalamazoo, about 150 miles west of Detroit. In April 2016, a judge ruled that Dalton was mentally competent to stand trial after psychiatrists determined he understood the charges against him. Two months later, prosecutors said Dalton's attorney, Eusebio Solis, told them the defendant intended to file a motion to use the insanity defense. After his guilty plea on Monday, Dalton faces a life sentence without parole, Kalamazoo Prosecuting Attorney Jeffrey Gettings said in a statement. Solis did not immediately respond to Reuters' request for comment. Dalton submitted his guilty plea while jury selection was taking place in Kalamazoo County court, where he was standing trial this week.

EX-FRENCH BOXING CHAMP
PUNCHES COP, SURRENDERS

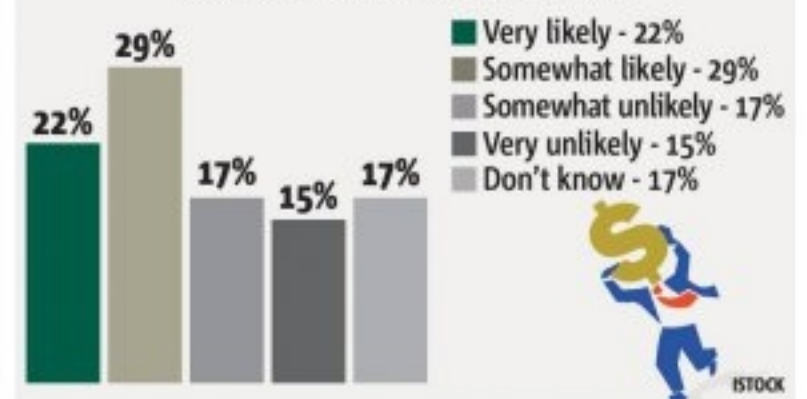

A former French boxing champion filmed landing punches on riot police during a 'yellow vest' protest in Paris last weekend turned himself in on Monday, saying he was defending himself. Christophe Dettinger, who was twice national light-heavyweight champion, was caught on camera jumping over the railings of a pedestrian bridge blocked by baton-wielding police before swinging blows at the officers, forcing them to retreat. Nicknamed the "Gypsy of Massy," the 6-foot-4 Dettinger was taking part in an eighth Saturday of anti-government protests that have undermined President Emmanuel Macron's authority. The demonstration began peacefully but turned aggressive as police fired tear gas to prevent protesters, who torched cars and burned barricades, from reaching parliament. "I was gassed with my friend, my wife, and at some point I was taken over by anger, so yes I acted badly. I acted badly, but I defended myself," Dettinger said in a video posted on Facebook before he handed himself in to police who arrested him. Interior Minister Christophe Castaner described Dettinger's assault as "cowardly and intolerable."

The Oscar-winning actor did not speak during the brief pre-trial hearing, while a judge ordered Spacey not to contact his alleged victim.

Former "House of Cards" star Kevin Spacey on Monday pleaded not guilty to sexually assaulting an 18-year-old man at a bar in Nantucket more than two years ago, while a judge ordered the man to preserve his mobile phone data from the time.

Dressed in a gray suit and tie, Spacey did not speak during a brief hearing in Nantucket District Court to face one count of felony indecent assault and battery, though a plea of not guilty was entered on his behalf by the court.

Spacey's lawyer Alan Jackson persuaded Judge Thomas Barrett to order Spacey's alleged victim to keep all data from his cellphone for six months following the July 7, 2016, incident. Jackson said the data was "likely exculpatory."

Jackson said in court papers that police reports showed the 18-year-old busboy exchanged numerous text messages and Snapchat videos with his then-girlfriend about his interactions with Spacey at the Club Car bar on the beach resort island off the coast of Massachusetts but never mentioned the alleged sexual assault.

Spacey could face up to five years in prison if convicted.

His appearance in a crowded courthouse surrounded by television trucks came at what is normally a quiet time of year the island, a former whaling hub.

The 59-year-old actor is one of dozens of men in entertainment, business and politics who have been accused of sexual misconduct since accusations against movie producer Harvey Weinstein in 2017 sparked the #MeToo movement.

Spacey became embroiled in controversy in October 2017 when actor Anthony Rapp accused him of trying to seduce him in 1986 when Rapp was 14.

Spacey apologized for inappropriate conduct with Rapp. The controversy led to Spacey being dropped from the Netflix television series "House of Cards" and erased from the film "All the Money in the World."

The Nantucket allegations were first raised in 2017 by former Boston television journalist Heather Unruh, who told reporters Spacey groped her teenage son.

The victim told police Spacey had bought him several rounds of beer and whiskey and said at one point, "Let's get drunk," according to charging documents.

"My client is a determined and encouraging voice for those victims not yet ready to report being sexually assaulted."

Mitchell Garabedian,
attorney for the accuser

As they stood next to a piano, Spacey groped Unruh's son, the busboy told investigators.

Reuters is not identifying Unruh's son because he is an alleged victim of sex assault.

"My client is a determined and encouraging voice for those victims not yet ready to report being sexually assaulted," attorney Mitchell Garabedian said in an email. REUTERS

What to expect from recreational marijuana in 2019

No doubt about it, 2018 wasn't the best year. However, it was pretty cool to see Massachusetts finally open its first recreational marijuana dispensaries, and those developments are giving us some hope for even brighter horizons in 2019. Here are some developments to keep a watch for, marijuana-wise, in the new year.

Will Boston finally get its first recreational dispensary?

Unfortunately, like all predictions surrounding the opening of dispensaries in Massachusetts, it's nearly impossible to pin down. That said, the spat of openings outside of the city last year point to some hope that locals can finally buy their recreational weed in Boston proper.

Eight different applications have been submitted for dispensaries in Suffolk County, according to the most recently available data on the Cannabis Control Commission website (from December 2018). Some proposed locations include Seaport, Mattapan, Roslindale, Jamaica Plain, East Boston and downtown Boston.

OK, fair enough. So what is for sure opening this year?

The good news is that more dispensaries received their final licenses from state regulators toward the end of last year, and should almost certainly open in early 2019. Theory Wellness in Great Barlington, Northeast Alternatives in Fall River, and Temescal Wellness (with two locations in Hudson and Pittsfield) should be serving their communities very soon.

What about outside of Massachusetts?

Fear not, non-Bay State New Englanders. Things are looking up for recreational marijuana in neighboring states, too.

Voters in Maine approved recreational marijuana in 2016 — just like Massachusetts — though the opening of shops has been long-stalled by Republican Gov. Paul LePage. Now, with a new Democratic administration, some lawmakers are promising that Maine could see pot shops as early as this year.

Newly inaugurated Connecticut Gov. Ned Lamont said that legalizing recreational marijuana in his state was a "top priority" for his new administration. Lawmakers in New Hampshire voted to legalize recreational marijuana in their state, though a veto threat from its Republican governor has put those plans on hold, at least temporarily.

Lawmakers in Rhode Island have also expressed an interest in making similar moves for their state, though they remain in the early stages. While Vermont also made possession of marijuana legal in 2016, state lawmakers are still struggling to craft a bill that would allow for a retail market in the state.

There are also positive signs that New York and New Jersey might take the step toward legalization as well in 2019. Seven other states have legalized recreational marijuana: Alaska, California, Colorado, Michigan, Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

Growing a career in the legal marijuana industry

Right now, one of the most red-hot industries coming to the Northeast is the legal marijuana industry. As many states on the West Coast, like California and Colorado, have been enjoying the spoils of legal marijuana for a few years now, states like Massachusetts on the East Coast are following suit with legal recreational use of the substance. With the recent news that New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo is looking to pass legislation legalizing marijuana in New York state, it seems like the dominoes are beginning to fall where they really count in the progression towards nationwide legalization. To give you a sense of how profitable it is projected to be, Business Insider recently predicted that legal marijuana will be a $21 billion industry by 2021.

You can practically feel the engines revving on this new career path as wider legalization is just around the corner. So what are some of the ways you can build your résumé to jump into this new boom career?

Make sure you have relevant experience

As dispensaries begin to pop up in newly legalized states, these new businesses will be looking to build their staff — much like their crops — from the ground up. That means the positions they are looking to fill run the gamut from experienced customer service employees and web developers to botanists with experience working with cannabis and individuals who hold degrees in chemistry and are able to work with cannabis extraction.

Make sure you have a clean rap sheet

Many dispensaries, such as Vangst in Boston, require applicants to be able to pass an FBI background check, and even include it on their ZipRecruiter applications in order to see if you have any hidden felonies in your past. Because the legalization of marijuana is such a new thing in states like Massachusetts, employers need to make sure that they only hire people who are interested in the product and, just as importantly, have never been on the wrong side of the law as a result of their interests prior to its legalization. So, before applying, make sure that everything in your past is accounted for.

Remember, this is a growing career

While you may be excited by the possibilities of working in a state with legal marijuana, remember that this is a business first. When you take out the meaning behind it, you are still handling a product that is being sold for a transaction. The business will only thrive if you help it to. PAT KING

Aidan Gillen digs into UFO culture with 'Project Blue Book'

The "Game of Thrones" alum talks about his new History series.

drew.husband@metro.us

Quick, name a TV show that has (or had) a massive dedicated following of fans. Chances are you picked "Game of Thrones," which will air its highly anticipated final season in April. But if you picked "The X-Files," you would be just as correct, since the paranormal police procedural has remained popular for decades. Enter Irish actor Aidan Gillen, a "Game of Thrones" alum who, thanks to History's new "X-Files"-esque show "Project Blue Book," is about to become a part of both worlds.

Gillen spoke with

Metro ahead of "Project Blue Book"'s premiere on Tuesday night. "The X-Files" is not necessarily something the 50-year-old actor considers himself a huge fan of; however, when it comes to the popular mythos that informs it, "Project Blue Book" and similar shows and movies about aliens and UFOs, he admits he's well-versed.

"A lot of the great movies of this genre actually were produced in the era they supposedly happened in, the 1950s," he says. "We also knew of them through popular TV shows like 'The Twilight Zone' and 'The Outer Limits,' which were both shown in Ireland. At least when I was growing up, everyone was quite familiar with this stuff. I think it was a universal thing by then, for sure."

Gillen also credits

The "Game of Thrones" alum trades in the realm of Westeros for a gig that's truly out of this world. EDUARDO ARAQUEL/HISTORY

Steven Spielberg's iconic film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," which popularized the classification system devised by J. Allen Hynek, the acclaimed UFO researcher he plays in "Project Blue Book." (Hynek himself also cameos in Spielberg's film.) Despite the global appeal of these stories, however, the actor made sure to quiz his family about their relevance back home in Ireland when the events depicted in the series were taking place.

"I quizzed my mother about this since she was around in the 1950s. I asked her, 'Were there any sightings in Ireland at the time? Was this phenomenon a palpable thing there?'" he says. "My mother then recounted a story of a UFO that she had seen herself in western Ireland in the early 1950s. That was pretty interesting."

"In Ireland, there's a lot of credence given to otherworldly things or things that are inexplicable. They're a part of our culture, be it ghosts or UFOs or whatever. It's quite acceptable that there are things at work that we can't see or quite totally comprehend."

"Project Blue Book" premieres tonight at 10 p.m. on History.

JIMMY TOSCANO

With the dust settled after Wild Card Weekend (for young Patriots fans: that's always the weekend BEFORE the Patriots play), the Los Angeles Chargers have emerged as the Patriots' next opponent.

And in order for the Chargers to become the first team in six years to win a playoff game in Foxboro, they'll have to play a heck of a lot better than they did against the Baltimore Ravens — and they'll most likely have to do it in below-freezing weather.

The forecast calls for a temperature hovering around 25 degrees, by far the coldest game of the year for the Chargers, a team that doesn't spend much time in a climate like this.

The Chargers previously played in Buffalo, but in September, and then in Pittsburgh on an unusually warm night in December (mid-40s). They won't be so lucky this time around, though.

That said, playing on the road hasn't stopped them this season. They're 8-0 outside of L.A., including wins in Kansas City, Seattle, Pittsburgh and, most recently, Baltimore.

A team that the Patriots don't see often — just twice in the last five seasons — the Chargers are led by their own veteran quarterback in Philip Rivers and a number of stud players on both sides of the ball. Let's take a closer look.

PHILIP RIVERS LEGACY GAME?!

OK, let's get this out of the way right off the bat: Rivers has eight kids. Just kidding (but it's true). The real thing we need to get out of the way, though, is that Rivers is 0-7 against Tom Brady over his career.

He does have one win against the Patriots back in 2008, but that was the year Brady missed after tearing his knee ligaments in Week 1. Literally, none of that matters in 2018, though — sorry for wasting your time.

What does matter? This season. And this season, Rivers' 15th, was one of his best as he finished tied for his second-highest quarterback rating (105.5) and completed 347-of-508 (68.3 percent) of his passes, the second-highest completion percentage of his career.

His 32 touchdowns were just two off his career high. You can see why the Chargers had one of the best offenses this season, but that's only part of the story...

BEWARE OF THE RUN

Patriots fans are well aware of what Chargers running back Melvin Gordon is capable of.

Last season in Foxboro, Gordon took a handoff 87 yards for the game's first score. The Pats limited him to just 45 yards the rest of the game, but he's still a force.

In 12 games this season, Gordon rushed for 885 yards, averaging 5.1 yards per carry. Yes, 5.1 yards per carry. His backup, Austin Ekeler, finished with 554 yards, averaging 5.2 yards per carry. Yes, 5.2.

So as you can see, the Chargers' running game is extremely effective. One would assume that they'd try to establish the run early, especially if the weather makes it more difficult to throw the air. To make matters worse, the Pats allowed 4.9 yards per carry, tied for third-worst in the NFL this year.

THIS DEFENSE MEANS BUSINESS

For all the talk about the Chargers offense, you wouldn't know they had a top 10 defense this season.

That's right, the Chargers allowed 333.7 yards per game this season, ninth-fewest in the NFL.

Taking a look at their roster, it's no wonder why. Defensive ends Joey Bosa and Melvin Ingram know how to get to the quarterback, and the Chargers' secondary is top-notch.

Rookie safety Derwin James was named to the AP All-Pro First Team, with Desmond King getting the honor at the defensive back position.

James had a team-high 105 tackles and is the defense's Swiss army knife out there. Adrian Phillips is another name to watch out for at safety and on special teams. This Chargers defense is a lot better than they get credit for.

Do you have type 2 diabetes?

Why are we doing this study?
Having high or low blood sugar levels can cause many different health problems in people with diabetes. We are doing this study to investigate two different insulins for their ability to keep the blood sugar stable and close to normal.

Why participate in a clinical study?
By participating, you will contribute to improve the treatment options for people with type 2 diabetes. You will also take an active role in your own health-care and you may learn more about the management of your diabetes. All clinical studies have a number of potential benefits but also potential risks. The study doctor will explain these to you before you decide to participate or not.

If so, you may want to consider participating in a clinical study which will compare the effect on blood sugar levels of two medicines: insulin degludec (100 U/mL) and insulin glargine (100 U/mL), in people with type 2 diabetes.

What will this study look at?
The study participants will be asked to wear a small (35mm x 5mm) blood sugar sensor on the back of the upper arm 3 times during the study.

What do I do next?
The SWITCH PRO study is currently looking for study participants. If you are interested in learning more about the study, please contact the study team:
